From Our Rector

If they were all one part, where would the body be? (1 Corinthians 12:19)

Saint Paul uses this famous analogy to reveal the importance we all play as Christ's partners in salvation history. Using relatable terms, Paul makes the case that we are all necessary for the life of the Church; none but Christ is greater.

Today, the divisions within our country are being played out in the halls of Congress, trickling down to our workplaces and homes, and spread across social media. Divisions within our Church continue to exacerbate wounds unhealed and questions unanswered. "If one part suffers, all the parts suffer with it;" we are left exasperated and exhausted.

But just as Paul encourages those early Christians, his words resonate to us today. If one part of our body is injured, then we do all we can to heal it. If the wound is self-inflicted, then we look in our hearts and to others for ways to heal both body and spirit. If we are tempted to just give up, then our body becomes weaker. John Donne once said that "no man is an island." Along those lines, Frank Capra showed us in his wonderful "It's a Wonderful Life," that each person's life affects the other. You never know when God is calling you to be the answer to someone's prayer. We need one another in our communities and our Church; we must be "steadfast... knowing that in the Lord [our] labor is not in vain."

Letters on the upcoming Bishop's Lenten Appeal are beginning to land in mailboxes now. Just as today's Gospel reminds us of our connection with each other, so to the BLA reminds us that we, as members of our diocesan family, are united in faith. In this, the first year of our Jubilee celebration, I ask you to consider making your gift to the BLA "in memory" of the one to whom we owe all our blessings: Our Lord Jesus Christ. Thank you as always for your support and prayers.

God Bless.
