From Our Rector

But Jesus passed through the midst of them and went away." (Luke 4:30)

"Local Boy Does Great Things... But Not Here." That could have been the title in a Nazarean paper, had they existed during Jesus' time. Neighbors and friends were amazed at what they had heard: miracles happening elsewhere like Cana; now show us! We're your family! "Do here in your native place the things we have heard were done in Capernaum."(Luke 4:23)

Jesus doesn't give the expected answer; instead, he chastises the people of Nazareth for their demands. He reminds them of the Old Testament wisdom that it was not the Jews who received and recognized God, but Syrians and other non-Israelites. He upsets the status quo: calling outsiders to Him, saving those thought beyond salvation or indeed worthy of it.

Everyone is invited to participate in Jesus' ministry. Paul's letter to the Corinthians reveals the true meaning of this invitation: that we are called to love each other and especially those deemed unlovable.

We hear the words, "love is patient, love is kind, etc." at many weddings; but it is not just a bride and groom who need to be reminded of love's sacrifice and power. Regardless of our vocation, we were made from love, for love and to give love. We were made to lend sympathetic ears to friends in distress; to be patient with those who test its limits in our homes, workplaces, schools, and communities; to be kind in our words and actions. We are called to share in the happiness of others and avoid the downward spiral of jealousy or pettiness. We are called less to judgment than we are to understanding and compassion.

So easy to recite, and yet so hard to put into practice. Because we are human and we get angry; we get hurt, and sometimes we're just not that nice. But the most important message in Paul's scripture is not a litany of adjectives but the simple: "Love never fails." It doesn't mean we have to like everything and everyone, and it certainly doesn't mean that we can do it on our own. We need Christ in our lives, through Sacrament and example.

I ask you to keep Christ in your hearts so that He does not "pass through [your] midst."

Beginning today, we celebrate Catholic Schools Week. How blessed are we with such dedicated educators, committed parents, and supportive parishioners? I invite you to take a look this week (and every week) to see why our students are Made for More. God Bless. Fr. Posey

This statement dovetails from our Mission Statement providing a clear path for our future. Each area plan will have short, medium and long terms goals. Final plans will be collected next month. The entire report will be disseminated in April. We are excited for what lies ahead!
