From Our Rector

"That the dead will rise even Moses made known in the passage about the bush, when he called out 'Lord,' the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob; and he is not God of the dead, but of the living, for to him all are alive." Luke 20:27-38

There's a new kid in town and Luke introduces him as a group: Sadducees. Like the Pharisees, they were pillars in their communities, but unlike them, they did not believe in the afterlife. They believed only the Torah (the first 5 books of the Bible) provided the truth and in those books, there is no mention of an afterlife.

To entrap and mock Jesus, the Sadducees posed the improbable question about the wife passed from one brother to the next in the hopes of securing a blood line, "whose wife will that woman be?" in the afterlife? If, as the Pharisees believed, your resurrected life continues your earthly one, and the law clearly states a woman can have but one husband, Jesus' profession of life everlasting contradicts the law he says he fulfills.

By citing Moses, Jesus counters the Sadducees, but he still needs to disabuse all of them of their notions of what an afterlife looks like. We tend to take the Pharisees one step further: our lives, our bodies perfected. But what does that mean exactly? Jesus speaks of the difference between this earth and "the coming age," where the dead "are like angles."

What our minds cannot fathom, our imagination conjures. Is heaven white robed men and women floating on puffy cumulus clouds? Is it suburbia on steroids like the TV show "The Good Place?" No lines at your celestial coffee shop?

We don't know the details. What we do know, what we profess, is that we will be with God. We will be reunited with those we loved and who loved us. What form that takes is immaterial. Jesus told us that we were created for eternal life. The beautiful words of St. Paul reassure us of this: "Eye has not seen, nor ear heard, nor has it entered into our hearts what things God has prepared for those who love him."

God Bless. Fr. Posey
